

IN MEMORIAM

It is very difficult for our minds to grasp the fact that someone we have known as a friend and fellow student during the past years is gone from us forever.

The death of Patty Black came as a cruel surprise to us all. Her charm and bubbling personality brightened many a dreary day at Jenkins and her tremendous school spirit was an inspiration to everyone. Her absence will create a void which will never be filled.

Jenkins has had its share of heartbreak over the last two years and now fate has struck again. Patty is gone, and Jenkins has lost more than just a student. Somehow, it just won't be the same without her.

ASK THE STUDENTS

Q. Do you think the first character college assembly answered enough questions to be called a success?

Marvin Brown - No, because the questions were not answered in a direct way. Although it showed progress in that people are aware of today's problems.

MARY LEE DOSS - It wasn't as good as I thought because it didn't ask the questions I'd like to have answered.

MICHAEL O'CONNOR - It was O.K. I just wish I could have argued with everything they said.

KURT SCHWALBE - The first one was a flop. If we have more like the second they should be successful.

DAVID NELSON - I don't think there were enough questions and time.

MAVA BYRD - It was a very honest discussion, and I believe it was worthwhile.

DENNIE BRINSON - I don't think it answered as many questions as thoroughly as it could have.

LESLIE HEWETT - No. All the questions were on one subject. There are many other questions that teenagers want answered. It did start the way for the two generations to get together and talk about their problems in a settled way.

MARLA BARNES - I think it should have gone more into detail.
